TAFT OPPOSES CONFIRMATION OF D. E. LILIENTHAL

Chairman of G. O. P. Policy Committee Issues Strong Opposing Statement

IS "POWER-HUNGRY"

Taft Also Accuses Lilienthal of Being Contemptuous Toward the Senate

By Frank B. Allen
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(INS)—Sen. Robert A. Taft (R) Ohio, chairman of the powerful Republican Policy Committee and regarded as the GOP's top man on domestic affairs, came out yesterday in a strong statement against David E. Lilienthal as the nation's atomic chief.

Taft charged that Lilienthal is "soft" toward Communists and Russia and "temperamentally unfitted" to head an important agency.

Like the other GOP leaders, Taft accused Lilienthal of being arbitrary and contemptuous toward the Senate, and then went further and charged that he was "power-hungry" and "guilty of dishonest practices" in his feud with Dr. A. E. Morgan within Tennessee Valley Authority.

Taft said that under the Lilienthal report on world control of the atomic bomb, "all atom manufacture was to be turned over to an international authority to duplicate our plants throughout the world—including Russia.

"No practical suggestion for safeguards were included. The whole emphasis in the report had to be changed by Mr. Baruch."

The Ohio Senator said that he would consider confirmation of Lilienthal "a real threat to our national safety."

Dinner-Theatre Party Is Arranged By Local Club

Plans for future events were discussed when members of the Bristol Business Girls' Club gathered at the home of Mrs. James Patton, Linden street, on Thursday evening.

One of the affairs is a dinner and theatre party in Philadelphia on March 6th, when the group will witness "The Red Mill". All desiring to participate are asked to contact Mrs. Patton (Bristol 9405) before February 23rd. Members will also make a tour to Philadelphia soon to visit places of historical interest. The date is yet to be set.

Discussion took place relative to forming roller skating parties; likewise to formation of a bowling team.

The association, assisted by the Girl Scout troops of St. James' Episcopal and Bristol Methodist Churches, collected funds in the local theatres for the infantile paralysis "March of Dimes" fund.

Treasurer's report was presented at the meeting by Miss Theresa Ferry.

The next meeting, March 11th, will mark election of officers.

At the conclusion of Thursday's meeting, a surprise miscellaneous shower was tendered Miss Vivian Fenton. Gifts were attached to pink and white ribbons extending from a white bell in the center of the living room. A rainbow wedding party in miniature graced the table where refreshments were served. The clothes-pin dolls included a bride, maid of honor, two bridesmaids, and flower girl. Miss Fenton threw a miniature bridal bouquet to the group, it being caught by Miss Margaret Yeagle. The social affair was arranged by Mrs. Patton, assisted by Miss Lillian Waldron and Miss Theresa Ferry. Refreshments of cheese and crackers, potato chips, pickles, pretzels, ice cream, cake and hot chocolate were served.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

Enough To Dismay Them

Washington, Feb. 22.

A DEGREE of dismay is beginning to afflict Republican leaders in Congress who so optimistically and widely advertised their purpose to cut expenditures, balance the budget, reduce taxes and make down payments on the debt. They still say they are going to do all these things, but they say it in a weaker voice and worry rides them hard.

THIS is not so much because of differences among the leaders. It is not because of any diminution of desire or wavering as to direction. And it is not because the howl against the proposed $6,000,000,000 cut in the Truman budget, which House Republicans are unitedly supporting, has appalled them. No matter what cut is proposed there will be screams of protest. They will be told that it can't be done without crippling national defense, etc. Yet Democratic Senator Harry Byrd, who is not a reckless man, who is as reluctant to "cripple national defense" as anyone and who knows this subject of governmental expenditures better than any other man in Congress, in a strong Senate speech on Wednesday not

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

President Truman sent a special message to Congress urging an appropriation of $350,000,000 for relief in liberated countries.

Senator Vandenberg urged his colleagues to limit the slash of Mr. Truman's budget to $4,500,000,000 as against the $6,000,000,000 reduction approved by the House.

Another Republican leader, Senator Taft, took a stand on the nomination of David E. Lilienthal as chairman of the United States Atomic Energy Commission opposite to that which Senator Vandenberg is expected to take. Mr. Taft said he would vote against Mr. Lilienthal because he believed him "temperamentally unfitted."

The United States will have 6,800,000 tons of sugar this year, equal to 90 pounds a person, against 73 pounds last year.

A coalition of Republicans and conservative Democrats on the Judiciary Committee sent to the House floor a bill that not only would outlaw an employer's liability in portal-to-portal pay suits, but also would sharply restrict his responsibility under all three Federal minimum-wage laws.

Britain must work harder, while living on a frugal basis, to increase her output if she is to meet an export goal of 140 per cent of prewar volume, the Labor Government announced in a White Paper outlining a severe economic plan for the nation.

Britain was expected to increase the Jewish immigration quota to Palestine, which now permits the entry of 1,500 immigrants a month.

The French Cabinet forbade rival demonstrations by the conservative, strongly anti-Communist Republican Liberal party and the Communists for fear of a clash that would affect the unity of the nation.

Italy, confronted with the problem of insufficient food production to meet the needs of an increasing population, signed an agreement with Argentina to help Italian workers to move to South America. Argentina set no limit on the number of Italians she would receive, and it was hoped that at least 5,000 a month would settle in that country.

In China, Nationalist forces were reported to be raising the tempo of their offensive in southern Shantung and eastern Honan Province.

HOUSE STANDS BY ITS GUNS

By an apparently unanimous vote, the Republican members of the House of Representatives have backed up their proposal that President Truman's budget be cut at least $6,000,000,000.

The re-affirming by the House Republicans of their insistence on drastic spending cuts came after the Republicans in the Senate, by the narrow margin of 22 to 19, had held out for smaller reductions—totalling only $4,500,000,000.

This difference of opinion, in the basic question of government spending and hence of taxation, presents many interesting questions.

One of them, of course, is purely political. That is the division between schools of Republican thought. It is striking that the House is solidly behind a program in which the Senate is so uncertain and badly split. A developing tug-of-war is bound to result, in the course of which many Presidential hopefuls may receive painful scars.

Another also has its political phases. The House Republicans have clear command of the Lower Chamber, so long as they stand shoulder to shoulder. They could even spare a few defections and still keep their control. But in the Senate the situation is different. The margin is close at best, and a split in the Republican membership throws the balance of power to the Democratic faction.

Here again the result is most interesting. Many Democrats, followers of Senator Byrd, of Virginia, are just as insistent on rigid economy as any Republicans. There is a distinct possibility that a program solidly backed by the House Republicans might be carried in the Senate only by a fusion of Republicans and Southern Democrats, against the votes of many Republican members.

In its broader aspects, the situation may be said to be one in which the House has rather the best of the argument.

The Congressmen are, unquestionably, closer to public opinion than are the Senators—a Senator measures his constituents in millions, a Congressman only in thousands. Moreover, Congressmen, having to run at two year intervals instead of six, keep their ears closer to the ground.

At any given time, when such difference is developing, it is a pretty fair bet that a strong sentiment in the House more accurately reflects the public's point of view than a divided opinion in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—(INS)—

Status of Bill

First. Introduction: By a Member by laying the bill on the Clerk's table informally. A Member sometimes introduces a petition only, leaving to the committee the drawing of a bill, such a petition referred to a committee having jurisdiction over the subject giving authority to report a bill. Sometimes communications addressed to the House from the executive departments or from other sources are referred to committees by the Speaker and give authority for the committees to originate bills. Messages from the President also are referred by the Speaker of the House and give jurisdiction to the committees receiving them to originate bills.

Second. Reference to a standing committee: Bills are referred under direction of the Speaker. A bill is numbered and printed when referred.

Study of the bill is then undertaken by the committee membership, often-times by a subdivision of the committee, before whom proponents and opponents of the contemplated legislation are heard. The various governmental subdivisions to be affected are consulted, and Members of Congress other than committee members are heard.

Third. Reported from the committee: Committees having leave to report at any time make their reports from the floor; other committees make their reports by laying them on the Clerk's table informally. The bill and the report are printed when reported.

Fourth. Placed on the calendar: Occasionally a privileged bill is considered when reported, but usually it is placed with the unprivileged bills on the calendar where it belongs under the rule by direction of the Speaker.

Fifth. Consideration in Committee of the Whole. Bills which do not raise revenue or make or authorize appropriations of money or property do not go through this stage. All other bills are considered in Committee of the Whole. The stages of consideration in Committee of the Whole are: General debate; reading for amendment under the 5-minute rule; order to lay aside with a favorable recommendation or to rise and report; reporting of the bill to the House.

QUIZZES EXCHANGEITES ON THE MOTOR CODE

Cpl. Leland Emory Informs That Most Accidents Occur In Clear Weather

TWO FILMS SHOWN

Cpl. Leland Emory, of Penna State Police, was the guest speaker appearing before members of the Exchange Club in the Elks home on Thursday evening. Sheridan B. Metz presided, with the program outlined by David Hertzler, chairman of the program committee for February.

The first part of the program presented by the State Trooper was in the form of a quiz. Questions put to Exchangeites were taken from the Penna. Motor Vehicular Code. They covered speed limits, parking regulations, expiration dates of operators' licenses, requirements for reporting accidents, required frequency of motor vehicle inspections, total number of fatal accidents in the United States, periods at which most accidents occur and whether most take place in travelling forward, turning, or backing.

Officer Emory informed that at night a person should keep speed at a rate which the car can be stopped within the beam-distance of the head-lights. He informed that most accidents occur on the straight away and in clear weather, much to the surprise of those queried. To emphasize this, he told that the greatest number of accidents in the state occur on the Pennsylvania Turnpike, which has no intersections, no great curves, and no hills, where the speed limit is 70 mile per hour, and where pedestrians are not permitted.

The speaker told of necessity of emphasizing the three "E's" of careful driving — engineering, enforcement and education. Regarding engineering, he said that modern devices have produced the present car which accounts for everything but the human element. In educational lines the state police, through school programs and assemblies, try to emphasize to the younger generation the necessity for careful driving. "The police endeavor to enforce the spirit as well as the letter of the law," he added. "Too many individuals are insistent on having the right of way, and we hope some day to have reverence for law become a political religion of the nation."

William Lehman, district manager of Doylestown office, Automobile Club of Philadelphia, showed two films, "Wanton Murder" and "Teach Them to Drive", these being AAA films. A discussion period followed.

TRAFFIC GRADUALLY APPROACHING NORMAL

Primary Routes Open, But Some Secondary Roads Are Still Closed

2 HURT, TRUCK CRASH

Traffic is gradually resuming somewhat normal conditions after the "baby blizzard" which covered the eastern seaboard with a 10 to 12 inch snowfall Thursday night and Friday morning.

State Police at Langhorne barracks said this morning that primary highways are open to traffic, although a number of secondary roads remain closed because of drifts.

One accident was reported to State Police at Langhorne yesterday shortly before noon, two Middletown Township men being injured.

Vehicular traffic in Bristol and other nearby towns is still greatly handicapped on other than state highways passing through those communities. The temperature this morning at seven o'clock was 14 degrees above zero.

Mill street, in Bristol, is being cleared of snow, work getting underway yesterday afternoon.

The accident reported to state police yesterday morning involved a pick-up truck driven by Joseph O'Neill, R. D. 1, Bristol, and a large truck of the Murphy Motor Freight Co., 2722 Federal street, Philadelphia, operated by John J. McTammy, of the 2900 block of Annin St., that city. According to Officer Leibergal, the Murphy Co. truck skidded across the Lincoln Highway, one-quarter mile east of South Langhorne and struck the pick-up truck owned by Charles O'Neill and operated by his son, Joseph. Joseph O'Neill and his brother, James, who was also in the truck, were both injured. They were treated at the office of a South Langhorne physician. James suffered lacerations about both eyes, abrasions of the left knee and left hand; and Joseph, laceration about the left eye. Mc-

JUDGE REMINDS A LOCAL COUPLE OF DUTY TO CHILDREN

H. H. Barnes Offers To Pay Wife's Share of Costs To Keep Her From Jail

FIGHTS ARE AIRED

Employees of Morrisville Firm Also Appear in Bucks County Court

DOYLESTOWN, Feb. 22—Declaring that it was their duty as American citizens to provide a home for their children so that they could have the benefit of unbroken home life, Judge Fred W. Davis, before sentencing a Bristol father and mother in criminal court, here, Tuesday, said:

"You will have to overlook a lot and you must perform your duties with the same sense of duty that men and women did in the armed forces, because you owe it to your children."

Harry H. Barnes, of the Keystone Hotel, Bristol, had just been acquitted of a charge of assault and batter preferred by his wife, Heddy Barnes, 812 Fourth avenue, Bristol.

The jury, which was bewildered by the tale of brutality and drinking, including the pointing of a rifle and the mother saying, "Blow my brains out," divided the costs between the husband and wife.

When the defendant-husband learned that his wife, who is now living apart from him, would have to go to prison because she had no funds, he offered to pay her half. The costs will amount to about $50.

Mrs. Heddy Barnes, the prosecutrix, testified that her husband began abusing her December 23, 1946, when she returned home from the movies about seven o'clock in the evening.

She testified that her husband, who is a mechanical engineer, had been drinking the whole day and that he took four 22-calibre rifle bullets from a shelf and showed them to her saying that they were for two men he named.

"'You tell them this is what they are going to get,' my husband said to me," Mrs. Barnes testified.

Another young couple, Harold and Hilda Beerhalter, 1012 Court D, Terrace II, Bristol Township, who were living in the same house, told of various fights and how they "broke them up," between the husband and wife, who were continually "nagging and finding fault with one another."

Mrs. Barnes, who admitted that at one time she had her husband down, testified she went to the closet in his bedroom and got out the rifle, pointing it at him and saying, "Blow my brains out. You have done enough to me."

Later in his testimony the defendant-husband testified that his wife pointed the rifle at him and said "she was going to load the thing and shoot me. She bit me twice with the barrel of the rifle before I could get out of bed," the husband said.

George Ayres, 26, Bristol township, who is a brother of Mrs. Barnes, testified he did not see his brother-in-law strike his sister, but that they had been drinking when

WASHINGTON

The name, Washington, to many persons may have come to mean little more than the national capital, a towering monument, a street on the Pacific coast, a national holiday. With the man, George Washington, receding into shadowy legend, the status of the United States as a young nation seems no longer secure. In fact, there are signs that it is growing old.

At times, in their querulousness and eagerness to guard their material advantages, Americans seem to be slipping. This is a good day for thinking it over.

Our veneration of Washington as the Father of His Country might well inspire a re-estimate of ourselves as beneficiaries of the patrimony he left us. To this must be traced much of our national estate, wealth, security, power and all the things by which we set store. The paternal stature of Washington may have grown dim but it remains definite for all time. In many ways, it still serves as a measure of individual patriotism.

The deeds of Washington and the winning of American independence are inseparably linked, and his personal strength of character still is the model of true Americanism.

The Father of His Country fought for it with complete self-abnegation and without limit of sacrifice. Much of his time he had to stand alone. His faith made possible the America that is ours today. His clear vision beyond the years, his unwavering self-reliance, his indomitable will—these were his instruments in surveying the new fields of our liberties.

In memory of him we may well revise our national sense of values, holding fast to those things we know to be good and accepting life's vicissitudes as a challenge to our courage and steadfastness. His devotion to country constitutes a glorious inheritance.

PENETRATING ANTARCTIC

The Byrd expedition to the Antarctic is penetrating deeper into the unknown region than did any of its predecessors. News that what appeared to be warm springs had been discovered is followed by word that a sea plane alighted in the region and the water was definitely warmer than found elsewhere. What appeared to be ore-bearing rocks were seen.

Outcroppings of the rock were also seen by crew members of a second Mariner plane which flew west of the lake region. The plane's magnetic compass, it was reported, behaved almost normally during flight over the outcroppings, which appeared in an area which has an altitude of nearly 6,000 feet.

Moreover, under the Constitution, it appears to have been the intention to give the lower house the whip hand in money matters, since it is provided that "All Bills for raising Revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur in Amendments as on other Bills."

Obviously, if the House were to stand firm and refuse to pass tax bills going beyond the limits it has in mind, there is nothing the Senate could do, in the long run, to make it change its mind.

The basic difference of opinion about the budget figures, as interpreted by the two houses, seems to revolve around the question of military appropriations. In other fields there is substantial agreement.

The prevailing argument in the Senate is that the international situation is too dangerous for them to be willing to take chances on cutting the funds for the armed forces. They don't put it quite this way—but obviously they would prefer to take a chance on waste rather than risk being blamed for a breakdown in military strength.

In the House, the thinking runs along different lines. There is a definite conviction that the military requests are full of "water"—that upwards of $2,000,000,000 can be squeezed out without real harm to the defense program.

As a practical matter, the House Republicans are backing the judgment of one of their members, John Taber, of New York, who is chairman of the Joint Budget Committee.

Congressman Taber has made a careful study of the nature of the military appropriations, and has been emphatic in his verdict that a large share of them are nothing but "pork"—that they are wasteful, and in some cases have nothing to do with military security.

If half of what the other Congressmen have heard is true, concerning Taber's specific discoveries about some of these "necessary" military requests, he is prepared to blow the lid off one of these days when resistence to his proposed reductions gets too strong.

That this may very well be the fact, and that the leaders of the armed forces may have asked for extravagantly large appropriations, is a possibility which the public in general is apt to agree with, on the strength of its own experiences and observations.

Former service men can, almost without exception, tell the most appalling stories of military waste they witnessed. They are fond of the saying: "There are three ways to do things: the right way, the wrong way, and the army way."

Ever since the defense program began back in 1940, there have been well-substantiated stories of gross and willful waste by military outfits. Much of the black-market gas formerly on sale was reported to have been smuggled out of military installations. Again and again it was reported by first-hand observers that, during the peak of the gasoline shortage, army-contracted gas was dumped because the storage tanks were full and the staff didn't want to turn it back.

At some war plants, millions of feet of excellent wood, received as crates and boxes, were burned during the midst of a serious lumber shortage.

For that matter, gigantic war plants were built, out of scarce materials, with whole villages of new houses surrounding them—and never put to the intended use. The wastefulness of the armed services was a seething scandal. Testimony of the most outrageous laxity was taken concerning one large depot in Pennsylvania, near the capital—and then the whole matter hushed up and forgotten.

Much of this, of course, is perfectly well known to President Truman—since as head of the Truman Committee during the War he complained bitterly about it.

If the House has in its possession evidence that the requested appropriations contained in the President's budget are as unnecessary and as loosely guarded as were similar appropriations during the war, then in the showdown those who are protesting that "we mustn't cut the military" are going to look pretty silly.

Dr. Heckman Speaks At Open Meeting of Sorosis

LANGHORNE, Feb. 22. — The Thursday evening program of Langhorne Sorosis, held in the local library, was arranged by the citizenship committee of which Mrs. Cleone Pannepacker is chairman.

The speaker was Dr. Oliver Heckman, superintendent of Langhorne-Middletown schools, whose subject was "What can we do to better educate youth for intelligent living in the world of tomorrow?"

Because of the interest in the subject, the meeting was opened to the public; but the inclement weather kept the attendance low. The interest was keen, however, as shown by the questions asked during a period thrown open for such.

Dr. Heckman's address was along the same lines as the one he had delivered the previous evening at the Hulmeville school. But the last part was given over to needs locally in the school building or erection of an additional building; need of more teachers to off-set alleged "unbalanced teacher-pupil ratio in Langhorne schools; new equipment, etc."

The hospitality committee, of which Mrs. Thomas Dawson is chairman, served refreshments.

Today's Quiet Moment

By the Rev. George F. Boswell
Rector, St. James' Episcopal Church

—o—

O blessed Master, we present unto Thee, all that we have done this first week of Lent. Lead us ever forward, and keep us mindful of those great characters, such as George Washington whose birth our nation commemorates today. Keep us ever from drifting from Thy way of living. Give each of us individually the strength and courage to be true witnesses for Thee, and grant that we may so live, that others will be helped to find Thee. Help us ever to praise Thy Holy name. Amen.

Traffic Gradually Approaching Normal

Tamany was not injured.

The O'Neill truck was practically wrecked, police report, damage being estimated at $600; while the larger vehicle was damaged to the extent of $20.

The regular meeting of the Travel Club was cancelled yesterday due to storm conditions.

Buses are gradually getting back on schedule as highway conditions improve.

In cleaning the snow from Mill street workmen completed two blocks by noon today, these extending from the highway to Wood street. The work will go forward today until the entire street has been cleared of snow. There are gangs of men and three trucks in use. Early today it was necessary to use picks on much of the snow that had become solidly packed.

Police officers yesterday "winked" at parking meter violations. It was impossible for motorists to park their cars in conformity with the parking meter ordinance.

No accidents were reported to police in Doylestown or other parts of central Bucks county.

State Highway Department workmen have been out day and night, it is stated, in order to clear the highways throughout Bucks county.

In Doylestown borough, snow is being removed from all the main streets, as is the usual custom, this being under direction of borough officials.

Transportation throughout the State approached normal today.

The snow storm took a toll of 18 deaths in the Philadelphia area alone.

Highway cindering crews and snowplows were still on the job clearing up the State's main road arteries, while city traction companies were nearly back to normal schedules today, following a hectic period of coping with huge drifts and other stalled traffic.

The weatherman, although he could not foresee any more snow for a while, said the temperatures would continue to be low today and tonight, with little hope for a thaw. However, he expected it would be warmer tomorrow.

HIGH SCORERS

High scorers at the pinochle party held in Torchon Post home, Wednesday evening were: Mrs. Harpel, 756; Pearl Wilson, 737; Anne Potter, 724; John Kropp, 718; L. Hellings, 704.

The Great Game of Politics

ofily supported the six billion cut but in detail showed how it could be done without crippling any essential function.

APPRECIATING the detailed knowledge of Senator Byrd and discounting the vehemence of the opposition as natural and inevitable, the Republican leaders—in the House at least—are not weakening. They earnestly want to reach their objectives and they know the necessity of making a record upon which they can successfully stand in 1948. The big trouble is that in concentrating upon how to slice old expenditures both House and Senate leaders underestimate—among other things—the pressure for new expenditures. This is a very serious business. For, if some way is not found to resist the new proposals for vast expenditures, now pending or about to emerge, they easily can cancel out the most drastic pruning of the Truman budget, thus sinking us deeper in the debt-deficit mire than before.

LITERALLY, there is no limit to the amounts which Congress will be asked to appropriate. The projects are as varied as they are numerous and not one but has what appears to be a "meritorious case" and a popular appeal. Yet, if any considerable portion of them get through, we may as well throw up the sponge so far as any hope of doing anything save slide more swiftly down the toboggan to national bankruptcy. Of course, most of them will not get through; but some will, and if among these are the larger ones, all efforts toward recovering our financial equilibrium might as well be abandoned. The only thing then that could save us would be the presidential veto, and we do not yet know how dependable that will be.

THE idea, nurtured by the New Deal from its beginning in 1933, that the Government owes everybody a living; that Government aid is something to which the people are entitled; that the Government treasury is inexhaustible and the rich can always pay the bill—these and kindred ideas to a considerable extent still permeate the country and are not entirely absent from Congress. Primarily, they are responsible for the rush from so many quarters to grab large hunks of Government cash, regardless of the Government's exigencies.

IN half a dozen ways, the veterans are asking for more money—and the real bonus proposal has not yet made its appearance. The farmers are insisting upon the Government fulfilling its price guarantees and lifting the guarantee level. There is a real demand from builders for more public works and larger subsidies on materials. Hundreds of millions for housing and health are being asked. The President has recommended an extension of social security, and old people, through politically minded representatives, are seeking bigger pensions. More Federal millions for public school lunches are being urged.

MANY cities want increased Federal support for other projects than schools, and a score of states seek money for a variety of expensive "improvements." In addition, all over the world near-starving people look to this country for food supplies which means money. In other words, this Congress, as has been every Congress, is filled with men who, while proclaiming themselves in favor of retrenchment, are supporting measures which make retrenchment impossible. The difference is that in this Congress the measures call for more money and the men behind them appear more insistent.

THE great danger, of course, lies in the demands of the veterans. These have not yet fully developed but everybody knows they will and how difficult they are to oppose. They may reach an unprecedented sum, and it is still true, as the late Senator Reed Smoot said years ago, that no general pension or soldiers' bonus bill has ever been permanently defeated in Congress. They may fail at one session through a presidential veto or the refusal of one branch to acquiesce, but eventually they go through. It will take a great deal of courage and determination plus rigid party discipline for the Republicans to keep from being overwhelmed by this situation. There is, as yet, no proof that they have it in them to meet it successfully. What a nation of boobs we will appear and how silly our form of government will seem if, in such critical circumstances, our Congress balances the budget with one hand only to unbalance it with the other!

Answers To Questions On Personnel of Congress

Sixth. Reading a second time in the House: Bills not requiring consideration in Committee of the Whole are read a second time in full, after which they are open to debate and amendment in any part. Bills considered in Committee of the Whole are read a second time in full in that Committee and when reported out with or without amendments are not read in full again, but are subject to further debate or amendment in the House unless the previous question is ordered at once.

Seventh. Engrossment and third reading: The question on House bills is taken on ordering the engrossment and third reading at one vote. If decided in the affirmative, the reading a third time usually takes place at once, by title. But any Member may demand the reading in full of the engrossed copy, in which case the bill is laid aside until it can be engrossed. Senate bills come to the House in engrossed form, and the question is put on third reading only. When the question on engrossment and third reading of a House bill or third reading of a Senate bill is decided in the negative, the bill is lost as much as if defeated on the final passage. The question on engrossment and third reading is not made from the floor, but is put by the Speaker as a matter of course.

Eighth. Passage: The question on the passage of a bill is put by the Speaker as a matter of course, without awaiting a motion from the floor.

Ninth. Transmission to the Senate by message.

Tenth. Consideration by the Senate: In the Senate, House bills are usually referred to committees for consideration and report, after which they have their several readings, with opportunities for debate and amendment. The same procedure takes place in the House as to bills sent from the Senate.

Judge Reminds Couple Of Duty To Children

he stopped in at their home that Sunday evening.

Growing out of an argument in a Morrisville rubber factory, Walter Duraski, Wayne avenue, Trenton, N. J., went on trial before Judge Fred W. Davis on a charge of assault and battery.

Frank J. Zola, another employee, testified that on November 14, 1946, the defendant swept dust on him.

"We had an argument and the defendant threatened to break my nose. At quitting time when I left at 11.15 at night the defendant pushed me up against a fence. I was hit on the left side of my face and knocked down."

"At 10.30 I began cleaning the dust off my machine. He threw some dust back at me and said he had beat bigger guys than me in the Army.

"I heard him say he would like to know what would happen if he hit me on the skull with his lunch pail.

"I told him I was a married man and had a child and didn't want to fight in the shop because we would get fired," said the prosecutor.

The defendant, taking the stand, testified he was a tube operator in the rubber factory. The prosecutor is also a tube operator.

Deliberating less than an hour, a jury returned a verdict of not guilty, but divided the costs between Zola, the prosecutor, and Duraski, the defendant. The costs amounted to $30 without those incurred during the trial.
